Motorcycle Insurance

If you are familiar with the basics of automobile insurance, then you may already know more than you think about motorcycle insurance. If you ride a motorcycle on public roadways, you'll need the same basics as your automobile insurance: liability, collision, comprehensive, and uninsured/underinsured motorist coverage.

Motorcycles can be riskier than other vehicles. As a result, the cost of motorcycle insurance varies widely, so it pays to shop around. If you are concerned about high cost, you may want to consider some of the factors that affect motorcycle insurance premiums and take advantage of as many reductions as possible. For example, some companies offer discounts if you complete a motorcycle safety course, and for using additional safety and anti-theft equipment. Carrying all your other insurance policies with a single company can also lower the price. Your annual mileage, the bike's make, model, age, horsepower, and where it is stored can all affect the amount of your premium. As always, maintaining a clean driving record can keep your premiums down.

If you live in an area where winter shortens the riding season, some polices will take that into account and cut or eliminate premiums for the winter months.

To lower the price even further, consider eliminating comprehensive and collision insurance on motorcycles that are older and not financed. Consider higher deductibles, too.

If you like the freedom and lifestyle motorcycle riding offers, don't forget that the peace of mind that comes with insurance can add enjoyment to the time you spend in the saddle.

The information in this article is not intended to be tax or legal advice, and it may not be relied on for the purpose of avoiding any federal tax penalties. You are encouraged to seek tax or legal advice from an independent professional advisor. The content is derived from sources believed to be accurate. Neither the information presented nor any opinion expressed constitutes a solicitation for the purchase or sale of any product. This material was written and prepared by Emerald. © 2013 Emerald Connect, Inc.